Character Barks for an Imaginary RPG

Barks for a necromancer NPC in a hypothetical magical RPG game. The full sheet includes barks for Thief, Thug, and one Necromancer.

These barks are meant to describe different states of the NPC and how they relate to the player: idle, noticed-but-neutral, aggressive, scared and retreating, etc.

The full sheet is linked below, including a brief description of the narrative and characters:

Character Notes: Power-hungry mage who is full of grandiose beliefs about the importance of his necromantic abilities and, by extension, his own existence. Thinks he's all that and a magic hat.

Voice Lines for Hero Shooter Champions

A list of voice packs written for Paladins, including casting notes, a brief character description, and voice lines with context.

Lines should generally be short enough to play in combat and convey a specific purpose. I.e. “Hello” line should convey a greeting. Lines should be consistent where needed (base to character skin should have same or similar delivery for Ultimate / important cues).

The full sheet is linked below, including more characters:

Below is part of one example, the “Galactic Conqueror” skin for Vora. All the lines for this skin and additional “favorite skins” are in the sheet linked above.

Character	Vora	Radiant Stars	Skin	Galactic Conqueror
Voice Actor	Tiana Camacho
Casting notes	Female, late 20s. The epitome of anime villainess, her designs to defeat the Star Sisters and finally gain control of the universe are nearly complete. Evil and overconfident to the point of caricature, she is more than happy to explain just how more powerful she is than you and why her plans have succeeded even against your best efforts.
Character Notes	The peak of anime villain, she is evil and overconfident (and might monologue). Full of energy, villainous vibes, and a self-aware seriousness.
